

INTRODUCING

MOVIE POSTER ARCHIVES

Film Accessory Repository Title List

The primary role of film accessories, or movie posters, is to capture and present the essence of a film and present it to patrons to persuade them to come in and see the movie. The posters usually contain basic and dated information both about the creation of the film and the accessories themselves, becoming historic documents of that film for future perusal.

Unfortunately, because they were created for the industry and NOT for the public, a massive amount of film accessories has been simply destroyed.

Over the decades, both film and accessories for many titles have already been lost forever, and because of the poor quality of the material used, movie paper is being permanently lost at an unbelievable rate.

It Starts

In 2016, Movie Poster Archives (MPA) became the first ever 501©3 organization formed for the preservation of film accessories.

Due to the popularity of the material, the response has been overwhelming (over 3 million pieces received so far) to this basically impossible undertaking.

With no framework or available guidelines, sorting, categorizing, and filing of the massive stacks of accessories has been slow and frustrating. It has taken quite a bit of time to organize enough of the various sizes, styles and types, BUT MPA is now finally ready to present a starting list of Repository titles. Be aware that this is just the beginning.

This beginning Repository Title List consists of titles that are strictly from our physical files as we are not prepared to tackle the magnitude of our digital files yet.

We know that many procedures will change as we develop the best system possible to preserve these disappearing historical documents.

How the Repository Works

At the moment, we do not have the facilities for the public to be able to come search through as most of our material is still in storage in different locations. And, in addition, huge amounts have not yet been inventoried. We hope to grow and consolidate all the material in one location in the future to make public availability possible.

We are starting with a list of over 15,000 movie titles in physical files. Each title has from one to hundreds of pieces on file covering from the silent era until around 2010. We have a list of the title files and original release year (or U.S. release year) which you can search through.

If you find a title of interest, you can send an inquiry form and we will let you know what we currently have on file for that title. Hopefully, soon you will be able to search through online images for many of the titles.

This brings up another question. Are you looking for scans or acquisitions?

Acquisitions

Let's address acquisitions first. Because of the massive amount of material donated, we also have a massive amount of duplication (in one donation we received over 1000 pieces of the same item). MPA keeps one or two of each item for the Repository. Beyond that, we have a massive amount of duplicates that we make available.

MPA is so unique that it doesn't fit into the mainstream grant programs. Because of this, we have had to create our own revenue streams, including holding regular online auctions featuring excess material and/or those that don't fit into the scope of MPA.

We are NOW opening up for direct contact to give more access to some of the excess material to help support the Archive.

As a non-profit organization, value or age of an item is not considered, duplicates of all like kinds are the same cost which is calculated to cover the basic cost of handling and storage to help with overhead and expenses.

Scanning

We can provide a hi-res scan of any of our pieces directly on file for reference purposes only. We DO NOT, WILL NOT or CAN NOT provide ANY type of permission to utilize any piece in any way except for research. No Rights of Usage is implied and any usage other than for research must be obtained by the user. MPA is simply providing a copy of items we own.

Scans can be provided for a service fee to help cover our costs.

More information will be provided and questions answered when you fill out a request form to coincide with your request.

Database Under Construction

We have already realized that we have outgrown our physical lists, so we are in the process of moving it to a database format which will be introduced soon.

How to View the Repository Title List

This Repository Title List is designed to be used until the database is online. It is distributed in the pdf format.

To search for a particular title, use the "Find" option available in the Adobe Acrobat Reader.

To minimize the document size, the font size was kept small. The Acrobat Reader allows for the document to be enlarged using the  symbol.
